

Small Grant Fund Case Study

Transition University of St Andrews

What activity did you run?

We created a podcast that highlights the valuable work of our repair café, reuse store, and skillshare initiatives. The podcast will hopefully be informative and inspire the listeners.

Who were your main audience?

Our aim is to share the podcast with individuals or community groups locally that would like to start something similar in their community.

What did you learn?

We have never made a podcast before, so we were really excited when Ruth Sanderson, who works for the BBC, was willing to work with us. We made a podcast about our reuse, repair, and skill-sharing initiatives. It was a very exciting and nerve-racking experience, but we hope that the podcast highlights what we love doing in St Andrews with reuse, repair, and skill-sharing. We hope that listeners will enjoy the information and the stories of the people. Hopefully, it will inspire them to start something in their community.

Has your project increased your community's capacity to tackle the climate emergency?

All the individuals who were interviewed for the podcast, including our repair volunteers, students, and participants of our big giveaway, skill share session, and repair café, showed great enthusiasm for participating.

One of our electrical repair specialists was eager to share a few words, expressing his strong passion for addressing the issue of our throwaway society.
